Low fidelity prototypes:

One thing I noticed in a lot of shopping cart pages is that details about the purchases are typically displayed in their own section, often to the right. These details include purchase subtotal, taxes, shipping prices, etc. As a result, I chose to include this in a few of my low fidelity designs as well. I also used a more traditional list view of the items displayed. What I did change in some low-fidelity prototypes is the placement of things like the delete/ remove button, number of items, items names and details, etc.
